

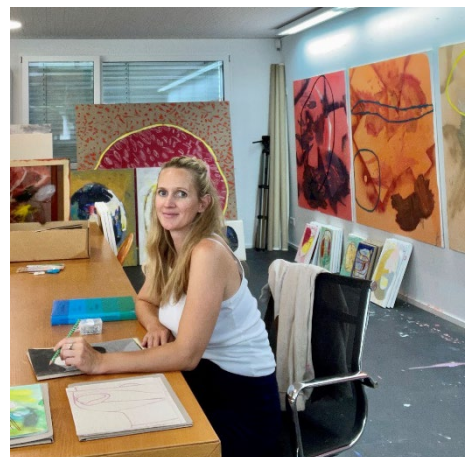

Exhibition "Spices and Cells" by Catrine Bak Bodum at HERMITAGE Lake Lucerne.

Catrine Bak Bodum's paintings are created intuitively but are always a continuation of previous works. Over the course she has developed her own vocabulary of form and color, which runs through her entire artistic work. She takes her inspiration from the here and now, everyday life with her children and a collage of cell images that she received as a gift. Hence the exhibition title "Spices and Cells" at HERMITAGE Lake Lucerne.

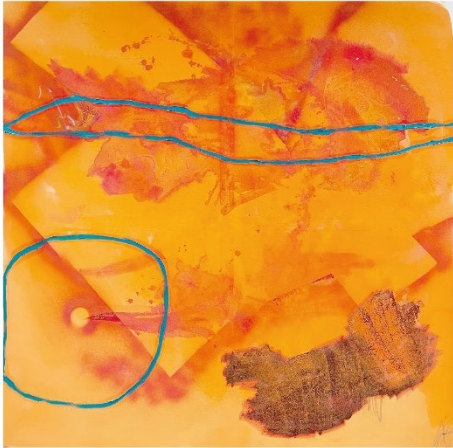

Even though art has always been her passion, Catrine Bak Bodum initially decided to study Modern & Jazz Dance. However, she quickly realised that she enjoyed painting and drawing courses more and successfully applied to the renowned Parsons School of Design in New York shortly before the application deadline.

After completing her Fine Arts studies at Parsons School and Central Saint Martins in London, the Danish-Swiss artist returned to her hometown Lucerne. Today, she presents her works in solo and selected group exhibitions both in Switzerland and abroad (UK, USA, Spain).

What does art mean to Catrine Bak Bodum? Trying things out, experimenting, enjoying the process, and following rules or not. She sees it like cooking, in the end it just has to be coherent.

This inspired Catrine for the title of the current exhibition "Spices and Cells". Because when you cook, you think about which spice goes with the dish and the ingredients or what effect it has on your health. The same applies to her paintings: Catrine asks herself which colours or shapes have which effect on the viewer.

In addition to the spices, cells, triggered by a collage given to her by a friend, are the subject of the exhibition. The variety of colors and organic shapes in this collage inspired Catrine Bak Bodum. She finds them harmonious, likeable, and appealing to the eye. For her, cells represent something complex that is simple at the same time.

From March 8 to June 2, 2024 (daily from noon to 10 pm), Catrine Bak Bodum will be showing her current portfolio consisting of the series "Girl having a girl", "Bauch/Maske - Belly/Mask", "November Serie - November Series", "A piece in Denmark" and "Spices and Cells" to international and local guests at HERMITAGE Lake Lucerne.
